NO DEFENSE

she did not do me any harm, I think. Did you ever see such a shameful exhibition as when Rand offered Julia her freedom if she would turn against me but Midget loves me too much to do me harm, don't you, Midget?" throwing her arms around her sister's neck and patting her upon the back.

"You bet I do," replied Julia, "and nothing I have said could hurt you or anything I could tell could hurt you."

"What do you think of that letter I wrote to Leslie Coggins?" continued Nan. "It was only a foolish note from a foolish girl, just the kind of a letter a girl writes once in her life and at the time I wrote it Young and I were not on good terms. I was engaged to Coggins and he pretended to love me and I thought a good deal of him but ain't I glad I did not marry him."

"Caesar always told me he was a snake in the grass and now I believe it. If he wasn't a snake he would never have given that letter to Johnny Millin. Why, Coggins came to see me last summer and gave me $50, and told me how sorry he was and said, 'Now you see what you got for not marrying me!' Nan then gave a shrug of her shoulders and said, 'That's a question.' Continuing she said:

"Coggins asked my father to meet him at the race track that afternoon, saying he would see Millin meanwhile and try to get everything out of him and tell me what Millin was doing. Then he came to me and told me that he and Millin had gone on a spree together and that Millin had stolen all his letters from his room at the St. James Hotel. But can you believe him? I think he gave the letters to Millin. It was a dirty, scurvy trick."

At this point Mr. Patterson came in and kissed his daughters affectionately. Regarding the story that Rand had led the defense into a trap during the testimony of Mrs. Smith, Mr. Patterson said he could not see where such a thing occurred.

"Mr. Levy," said Mr. Patterson, "is a very capable man and has conducted this case satisfactorily."

STEMPLE'S.

That Easy Grace.

Of course, you've noticed and admired that easy grace with which some women wear their clothes.

But have you stopped to think that this is due directly to the clothes themselves? If their cut and fit are such as to give ease and comfort, grace is easy.

Notice the graceful ways of WOOLTEX wearers.

They can't help themselves, really.

For every WOOLTEX garment is cut from living models, expertly tailored, assuring fit in every instance.

It's the fit that means comfort—the comfort that secures grace.

When you try on one of our WOOLTEX suits you'll notice and admire your own grace.

The line is fresh and full, and waiting for your inspection.

GENERAL FITZHUGH LEE IS DEAD

HE FAILED TO RALLY FROM ATTACK OF PARALYSIS AND DIED LAST NIGHT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 29.—General Fitzhugh Lee, U. S. A., retired, and one of Virginia's foremost sons, died at the Providence hospital here last night from an attack of apoplexy which he suffered early yesterday morning on a train while en route from Boston to Washington. After General Lee had been removed to the hospital it was evident to the attending physicians that his case was a very serious one, but they believed that his strong vitality and will power would assist materially in a partial recovery at least from the attack.

His condition remained fair considering the severity of the attack during the day, but shortly after 9 o'clock he began to grow weaker, his breathing became more rapid and his pulse slower, terminating in less than two hours in death. The end was peaceful and without pain, the general retaining consciousness until within five minutes of the end. Half an hour before death, General Lee recognized his brother, Daniel Lee, who came into the room for a moment.

MATCH HEAD

SET FIRE TO LACE CURTAIN CAUSING QUITE A SCARE LAST NIGHT.

Last night at 10 o'clock an alarm came into the central station from Gaston avenue, between Eighth and Ninth streets. The department made a quick run, and found that in the house occupied by John Scully, a lace curtain, a pillow and part of a mattress had been destroyed. One of the men in the house was lighting a cigar when the match head broke, and flying through the air struck the lace curtain, igniting it. The blaze was extinguished before the wagons arrived.

Many people started to the scene, and the South Side bridge was pretty well crowded about the time the whistle sounded the recall. However, after the recall had blown, several buggies, occupied by young men, tore across the bridge at a pace faster than that allowed on the streets in the outskirts of the city. It is a wonder that some one was not struck.
